

The Algilez Language Project

How quickly can you learn a language?
- a lot quicker than you think!

A local author has been working for some years with Greenwich University to produce a new artificial language (similar principle to Esperanto). It is intended to be much simpler and quicker to learn than natural languages, with the ultimate aim that it could become the main form of communication for international use.

A trial course at Greenwich showed that people could pick up the basic grammar in only 15 hours of teaching. We have successfully completed a more extensive 30 hour (20 week) course with U3A in Bournemouth, which our participants found very enjoyable, and we'd like to repeat the course next term.

Come and join us! We're looking for people who are interested in learning something new, who'd like to get involved in an on-going research project and who'd like to help contribute to an idea that could have a big impact on language teaching, both in the developed world and particularly in many third world countries.

The course will start in January 2017 and be on a Monday, 10.30 – 12.00am. Location is in the Charminster area of Bournemouth.

If you'd like to try something that is fun, mentally stimulating and very different then this is just the thing for you!

For more information you can call me on 01202 771764 or email to admin@algilez.com and I'll be happy to tell you about the project.

Alan and Sharon Giles

www.algilez.com